COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course examines Canadian history from Confederation (1867) to modern Canada. The focus will be on the major social, economic, political, and cultural developments as analyzed through the lenses of ethnicity, class, and gender. Themes to be considered include: Confederation and nation building; urban and industrial growth; Canada and the World Wars; the Great Depression; modern Quebec and Canada; Indigenous people; and Canadian culture. These themes will be explored through lectures, readings, discussions, assignments, and tests.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

Upon successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

- Identify the major events, themes, and processes that have contributed to Canada's growth as a nation.
- Explain the significance of major events, themes, and processes that have contributed to Canada's growth as a nation.
- Evaluate the experience of various groups including Indigenous peoples, French-Canadians, immigrants, and women since Confederation.
- Discuss the growth of Canada as a nation within and outside of Canada while considering imperialism and colonialism, its relationship with Britain and the United States, and role on the international stage.
- Assess representations of Canadian history in contemporary media, culture, and historic sites.
- Critically reflect on the experiences and events that have shaped the history of Canada since Confederation.
- Analyze primary and secondary sources related to Canadian history.
